ABSTRACT

A system, method, device, and computer program product to extract and gather peak information from an automated sequencer of bioinformatics into a peak database, and to manipulate and analyze the peak information within the database.